Comments about Drive \(Original Motion Picture Soundtrack\) - Cliff Martinez

Mamuro

I ordered the neon pink 2012 pressing. All I can say is: too much surface noise. It becomes ear grating after a while. The reissues from 2016 i hear are superior, but alas, if you do not want to spend $100+ on this soundtrack buy this.

Arcanefist

My copy is a little noisy which is a shame anyone else agree!? Heard this is getting a repress so might try again and get a good pressing !

ARE

Regarding what everyone else says about the sound quality...I guess I'll keep mine sealed for now. Do any of the vinyl versions sound good?

Frey

my opaque pink version from Mondo sounds great! (more words...)

Mitynarit

Experiencing same issues on the "A" side right off the first track. A slight static noise on the one edge of the disk and I can actually feel a rough patch on the edge. A little annoying but I think it gives it some character and it goes great with the replica jacket I bought!

Raniconne

Confirming what Big Earl & Lucabeer said. Sadly, side C of the pink version sounds as if it is scratched.

Levion

I have the pink version, first release. Unfortunately this is not a 180 gram pressing. Regarding to the sound quality I confirm what Lucabeer said. What a pity, but there is a cracking sound like from a long scratch on side C.

FLIDER

Is the pink pressing a heavy weight 180 gram vinyl pressing? I just bought this looking for a 180 gram pressing and have not opened it yet because the seller was not able to confirm if it was or not. Can anyone help me out? And is there really a difference in sound between the black vs. pink? I was under the impression that a heavy weight pressing generally always sounds better. I'd love to know what people think. Thanks!

Bludworm

The 180g vinyl is a hoax. It all comes down to mastering and pressing quality. If those two are not done properly, it sounds terrible no matter how much the vinyl weights.

Gaua

Mmmm, I have tried two copies of this one, and both have noticeable clicks and pops, and some hints of distortion on the second disc during the loudest/bassiest moments. This with a cartridge (AT440MLa) that usually tracks VERY well everything that's thrown at it.

asAS

Great release, wish they were all like this one. Thanks!

Kadar

How is the sound quality of this pink pressing? Complaints anyone?

Olelifan

Same here. I have listened the track with three different cartridge. Rest of the record sounds good.

Naktilar

I may have got a wrong one, waiting for a replacement piece. Hopefully that will sound right. On the 'Real hero' track the female vocal sounds robotic at higher pitch parts. I already bought a new needle as well, but same sound, tried in the shop, same stuff so they will replace it.

Ironrunner

Have to agree on that, sound pretty solid, don't have the "normal" edition either, though.

Zeks Horde

Sounds pretty legit, I cant give critiques to you on how it sounds compared to other pressings as I have no idea how they sound. Im happy with it tho.
